'Keep in Touch'

At the end of the course, you can transfer your 60 credits for our PGCE Online to progress to a Master's degree programme:

PROGRESS TO MASTER'S AFTER PGCE

Our PGCE Online is worth 60 credits at Masters level, so upon successful completion this summer students will have effectively achieved one third of a Masters degree (60/180 credits). We have a number of options for topping up to a full Masters degree. Below are the courses in our subject group and I am the course director for them:

MSc Digital Pedagogy

This is a new course, developed by the tutors that have led your PGCE. It focuses on key challenges and debates around digital learning and teaching as well provides hands-on and current information regarding designing digital artefacts and teaching materials.

It is delivered totally online (like your PGCE), and you can claim credit for your PGCE against this MSc, leaving only 120 credits remaining to achieve.

MA Transformative Education

This too is a new course developed by the leadership team behind your PGCE. Developed with experienced teachers in mind, the course requires you to undertake and research a transformative intervention in your educational arena. This will be context-specific, so might be implementing a new curriculum, developing some digital tools for your students, implementing a new pastoral system etc.. the possibilities are endless. It is delivered totally online (like your PGCE), and you can claim credit for your PGCE against this MA, leaving only 120 credits remaining to achieve: in the case of this course the remaining 120 credits would be achieved entirely through the completion of our 'capstone project' – the submission of a dissertation proposing, examining and evaluating your transformative intervention.
